Position Summary

SME's indoor air quality testing and remediation business is expanding rapidly, and we need professional personnel who are ready to support this growth. SME has a new full-time position for a Certified Industrial Hygienist who will be based at our headquarters in Cumberland, Maine, and travel to projects throughout Maine and occasionally out-of-state.

The Certified Industrial Hygienist will evaluate a range of safety issues in working environments, recommend solutions, and implement corrective programs. Accordingly, the CIH will perform work in areas where there may be a presence of hazardous materials, such as asbestos, lead, mold, PCBs, and Volatile Organic Compounds. The position also involves the preparation of reports that discuss analytical results and implications relative to occupational health and safety and hazardous materials regulatory compliance.

The ideal candidate will have proven expertise in key areas such as: air sampling and instrumentation; controls and ventilation; and project management. An understanding of building construction will be especially beneficial.

Required Qualifications and Skills

The ideal candidate will be dedicated and hard-working, with:

- Bachelor's degree in industrial hygiene or a related field,
- Certified Industrial Hygienist (CIH) certification,
- High level of organizational skills that are well suited to keeping tasks on schedule and on budget,
- Strong interpersonal and communication skills (written and verbal) to interact effectively with coworkers, clients, and the public,
- Strong background in, and understanding of, conducting asbestos assessments, indoor air quality evaluations, environmental remediation management, and industrial hygiene,
- Ten years of experience in related work, or a combination of experience and education,
- Proficient knowledge of relevant laws, policies, and procedures,
- Knowledge and experience with building construction and systems, and
- Willingness to travel to project sites.

Working at SME
